HIDE CAPTION

By Alex Labovitz

Posted May 21, 2015 at 5:08 PM
 Updated at 6:14 AM

EXETER — An Exeter man was arrested after posting comments online regarding Police Chief William Shupe, a charge that has drawn criticism from the American Civil Liberties Union.

Robert W. Frese, 62, of 43 Hayes Mobile Home Park, was charged May 23 with criminal defamation of character, a Class B misdemeanor. According to the complaint, Frese allegedly posted that "Chief Shupe covered up for a dirty cop."

Exeter police Patrol Capt. Stephan Poulin declined to comment on the arrest and said Shupe could not comment because "he's the victim."

Frese believes an online comment he made May 3, when he accused a recently retired Exeter officer of police misconduct and that Shupe "covered up for this dirty cop," led to the charge.

Frese said he's had issues with an officer in the department since a 2013 traffic stop. He was previously charged and convicted by Exeter police on charges of stalking in 2014 and criminal trespassing in 2017 for rummaging through a private dumpster.

Frese said he believes the defamation charge is "bogus" and that police charged him because it would trigger his re-arrest for violating good behavior as ordered from a prior conviction. "They know I'll go to jail if I get convicted of a misdemeanor," Frese said. "They want to silence me."

Gilles Bissonnette, legal director with the New Hampshire chapter of the ACLU, called on the Exeter police to dismiss the charge immediately. He cited the U.S. Supreme Court New York Times v. Sullivan decision that upheld the "actual malice" standard, before speech against public officials can be considered libel.

"There are serious free speech concerns with the enforcement of this criminal statute against the speech of this individual. Indeed, it appears that the police may be using this statute to suppress speech that is critical of police," Bissonette said. "Even in civil cases, public officials must meet a stringent standard in order to recover damages for defamatory statements. Allowing criminal prosecutions for such statements would give the government too much power to censor its critics, and would inevitably chill political speech lying at the heart of the First Amendment."

Frese was convicted March 26 of felony conduct after an accident that caused personal injury stemming from an incident Aug. 8, 2017, when he hit a construction flagger with his car in Portsmouth. According to an affidavit filed with the Portsmouth Circuit Court by officer Robert Lukacz, the flagger was interviewed at the hospital and said that before Frese drove into him, he told the flagger, "If you don't move, I'm going to run you over."

Frese was originally charged with felony first-degree assault and reckless conduct, but those charges were dismissed as part of a negotiated plea deal with prosecutors. He was sentenced to 2 to 4 years in prison, all but 67 days suspended as long as he remains on good behavior for the next two years.

In an interview for this story, Frese admitted to posting about Shupe and another officer in the comments section under a story published on Seacoastonline.com and on other websites. However, he does not believe his actions constitute defamation of character. Police would not comment on whether the post on Seacoastonline was the basis of the charge. Seacoastonline removed the comment because it contained a statement of fact that has not been proven.

The criminal complaint against Frese reads, "(Frese) purposely communicated on a public website, in writing, information which he knows to be false and knows will tend to expose another person to public contempt, by posting that Chief Shupe covered up for a dirty cop."

Rockingham County Attorney Patricia Conway said her office does not see many criminal defamation of character cases, but since the offense is a Class B misdemeanor, those cases are prosecuted by police departments and the assistant county attorneys who work under her.

Frese was released on a personal recognizance bail following his May 23 arrest. He is scheduled to be arraigned July 10 in Brentwood District Court.

Mr. Larkin,

Per our conversation this afternoon, you can now disregard the preservation request that the Exeter Police Department had sent to Gatehouse Media. The information is no longer needed.

You did ask if an e-mail address may have been associated with the user. It may be "exeterbob@yahoo.com".

Thank you for your efforts regarding our request. Take care.

Hello Ms. Sack,

I was provided your information by Howard from Seacoast Media Group. We are conducting a criminal investigation regarding an individual who posted a comment on one of the news articles that was published by the Seacoast Online Exeter Newsletter.

I am looking to speak with someone who can explain what types of information your company maintains (IP address logs, subscriber information, ect.) regarding the individual who posted said comment so I can send appropriate legal process.

I look forward to speaking with you soon.

Thank you Chief,

What a sad person he is... I called Howard and Glenn, Executive Editors w/SMG, soon after reading your previous email and alerted them. If you want to contact them directly they're at [REDACTED]. I did a good deal of work with them when I was working with the Prescott Park Arts Festival. I think they'd be willing to listen to any concerns or comments you want to share on the matter.

I did share with them that I thought it might be worth monitoring their comments section more diligently.

I'm sorry for any mess my past indiscretions have made and I'm grateful for your help in ensuring that my Dad's reputation and years of service are honored appropriately. Neither he, nor the EPD deserve to have shadows cast on the good work that you all do.

Please let me know if there's anything I can do to be helpful going forward.

This is the dirtiest most corrupt cop I have ever had the displeasure of knowing, he has committed perjury, false charges, conspiracy, false reports to law enforcement, along with his known prostitute daughter who went by the name Isabella Soprano and now goes by the name Angela Greene. Although the truth came out in court he and she were never charged, as the "Blue Wall" of police cover up protected him, and the coward Chief Shupe did nothing about it. D'Amato has nothing to be proud of and will be missed by no one. I picked up his drunk wife on a number of occasions and got her home safely. Good riddance to this creep. « less

D'Amato is the most corrupt cop I have known. He and his known prostitute daughter Isabella Soprano, who now goes by the name Angela Greene made false complaints against me which were dismissed in court. The coward Chief Shupe did nothing about it and covered up for this dirty cop. This is the most corrupt bunch of cops I have ever known and they continue to lie in court and harass people. Robert William D'Amato is the dirtiest cop I ever knew, he and his known prostitute daughter Isabella Soprano, who now goes by the name Angela Greene falsely accused me of a number of things and were never charged because Chief Shupe is a coward who covers up for his dirty cops. The charges were dismissed in court, but these are the type of cops you have in Exeter, do NOT trust them.

Retiring Exeter officer's favorite role: mentoring youth

EXETER — Police officer Dan D'Amato said his favorite part of his job was mentoring young people he helped in his more than two decades working for the Exeter Police Department, the majority serving as the high school resource officer.

He said one of the highlights of his career was further developing the Exeter Police Explorers Program, which has given adolescents in the area a first exposure to a law enforcement career or a career as a first responder. Many of his protégés have gone on to have successful law enforcement careers from state police agencies, to municipal police departments, to Military Police. Police Chief William Shupe credited D'Amato with building the program into what it is today.

"For me it was always about mentoring, I would tell kids interested in firefighting to join us because there were no fire explorers and we'll let them live in the program and if they don't like it, that's fine, they're getting great experience," D'Amato said. "We've done car safety, crosswalk safety, the science of what a bullet actually does when it impacts different objects and a lot more, so I tried to make it an all-around program. It's taking a bunch of different personalities and get 10 kids working together."

On Monday, D'Amato officially retired from the Exeter police force after 23 years of service and was honored with a luncheon with town officials, members of the police and fire departments, and his family.

D'Amato said as a high school student in Salem, Mass., he knew he wanted to be a part of "something bigger than himself" and with the help of a friend's father, who was a Delta pilot, he enrolled in the Delta Air Explorers Program. He also began canine demonstrations at local malls, which piqued his interest in military service. He began his military career in the Air Force as a dog handler and would go on to serve 20 years.

"That was the start of me wanting to be part of something larger than myself," D'Amato said. "When I got out of the military, I knew I wanted to stay in a career where I was a part of something and I was hired part-time as an officer in Newmarket and shortly afterwards I was hired in Exeter and I've been here since 1995."

As part of D'Amato's retirement ceremony, Shupe said he wanted to recognize D'Amato not only for his service to the town of Exeter but his service to his country in the Air Force. He decided to borrow a tradition of the Fire Department to give an American flag flown on the flagpole outside the public safety complex on the day of a fireman's retirement and begin a new tradition for police officers as well.

"I went to (Fire) Chief Brian Comeau to run this idea by him and between the two of us, we don't know if the Police Department has ever participated in this tradition, I always looked at it as a fire tradition, but Brian said, 'That flag out front is not just the Fire Department's,' so I thank him for allowing us to participate in this tradition," Shupe said. "I can't think of a better officer to start this tradition with than Dan D'Amato."

D'Amato said he was honored to be the start of the new Exeter police tradition and would be placing the flag alongside his flag given to him by the Air Force following his military service.

"It came as a shock really, and to be the first one here (in this department) to receive one is awesome," D'Amato said. "When I got out of the military, you get a flag when you retire that was flown over the capital, it's a real honor, so this is a great tradition to start here."

Town Manager Russ Dean presented D'Amato with a commemorative clock to thank him for his years of service and said he appreciated D'Amato being a friend to all the high school kids he interacted with during his tenure.

"Dan is a consummate professional, he's set a great example in our Police Department. He's a mentor, a leader and someone who others look up to and he's been an all-around excellent officer," Dean said. "Dan spent a lot of time at the high school and as a parent of children in the schools, I can't think of anything more important than having a presence out there. Dan's demeanor and his ability to carry himself in a way where he walks that line very nicely between being an officer and being a friend to the kids."

D'Amato said in his retirement, he won't be getting out of the business of teaching and mentoring. He said he would potentially get into teaching beginner motorcyclists how to ride, which may entail taking a trip to Wisconsin to attend the Harley-Davidson Riding Academy to take an instructor certification course. He will also begin working part-time as a security guard at Great Bay Community College, where he said he'll look forward to interacting with a new batch of students.

D'Amato said with his newfound free time he would take a few days to get caught up on yard work and ride his motorcycle with the weather finally getting warm, but his additional leisure won't come without missing the men and women he worked alongside for more than two decades.

"It's the camaraderie; the guys, the girls. You come to work and you're with other people and I've been doing that for 40 years; the military is a really tight-knit group and this department is as well, so I'm going to miss that," D'Amato said. "It's sinking in slowly, but for the next few days I'll wake up in the morning and grab a cup of coffee and work a few hours in the yard then get out on my motorcycle."

EXETER — An Exeter man was arrested after posting comments online regarding Police Chief William Shupe, a charge that has drawn criticism from the American Civil Liberties Union.

Robert W. Frese, 62, of 43 Hayes Mobile Home Park, was charged May 23 with criminal defamation of character, a Class B misdemeanor. According to the complaint, Frese allegedly posted that "Chief Shupe covered up for a dirty cop."

Exeter police Patrol Capt. Stephan Poulin declined to comment on the arrest and said Shupe could not comment because "he's the victim."

Frese believes an online comment he made May 3, when he accused a recently retired Exeter officer of police misconduct and that Shupe "covered up for this dirty cop," led to the charge.

Frese said he's had issues with an officer in the department since a 2013 traffic stop. He was previously charged and convicted by Exeter police on charges of stalking in 2014 and criminal trespassing in 2017 for rummaging through a private dumpster.

Frese said he believes the defamation charge is "bogus" and that police charged him because it would trigger his re-arrest for violating good behavior as ordered from a prior conviction. "They know I'll go to jail if I get convicted of a misdemeanor," Frese said. "They want to silence me."

Gilles Bissonnette, legal director with the New Hampshire chapter of the ACLU, called on the Exeter police to dismiss the charge immediately. He cited the U.S. Supreme Court New York Times v. Sullivan decision that upheld the "actual malice" standard, before speech against public officials can be considered libel.

EXE101

"There are serious free speech concerns with the enforcement of this criminal statute against the speech of this individual. Indeed, it appears that the police may be using this statute to suppress speech that is critical of police," Bissonette said. "Even in civil cases, public officials must meet a stringent standard in order to recover damages for defamatory statements. Allowing criminal prosecutions for such statements would give the government too much power to censor its critics, and would inevitably chill political speech lying at the heart of the First Amendment."

Frese was convicted March 26 of felony conduct after an accident that caused personal injury stemming from an incident Aug. 8, 2017, when he hit a construction flagger with his car in Portsmouth. According to an affidavit filed with the Portsmouth Circuit Court by officer Robert Lukacz, the flagger was interviewed at the hospital and said that before Frese drove into him, he told the flagger, "If you don't move, I'm going to run you over."

Frese was originally charged with felony first-degree assault and reckless conduct, but those charges were dismissed as part of a negotiated plea deal with prosecutors. He was sentenced to 2 to 4 years in prison, all but 67 days suspended as long as he remains on good behavior for the next two years.

In an interview for this story, Frese admitted to posting about Shupe and another officer in the comments section under a story published on Seacoastonline.com and on other websites. However, he does not believe his actions constitute defamation of character. Police would not comment on whether the post on Seacoastonline was the basis of the charge. Seacoastonline removed the comment because it contained a statement of fact that has not been proven.

The criminal complaint against Frese reads, "(Frese) purposely communicated on a public website, in writing, information which he knows to be false and knows will tend to expose another person to public contempt, by posting that Chief Shupe covered up for a dirty cop."

Rockingham County Attorney Patricia Conway said her office does not see many criminal defamation of character cases, but since the offense is a Class B misdemeanor, those cases are prosecuted by police departments and the assistant county attorneys who work under her.

Frese was released on a personal recognizance bail following his May 23 arrest. He is scheduled to be arraigned July 10 in Brentwood District Court.

The Exeter police department arrested RB on June ___, 2018 for one count of criminal defamation for making false statements about crimes committed by Chief William Shupe. Per procedure, an arrest warrant was presented to a judge who signed the warrant findings probable cause. After Mr. Frese's arrest the Attorney General reviewed the facts of this case and opined that the State would not prevail at trial under the higher burden of proof beyond a reasonable doubt. After careful consideration the Exeter Police Department has decided to Nolle Prose the charge.

The Exeter Police Department is dedicated to protecting it's citizens First Amendment rights and all the rights afforded by the United States Constitution. Further, we strive to enforce the laws of the State of New Hampshire in a fair and impartial manner. This case was brought in an effort to achieve these goals. We look forward to continuing protect and serve this community.

Hi Chief-

Couldn't fall asleep so I started a very rough draft of the press release. I think it's a good start- the last line might be a little too much. Not sure what else you're looking to include. See you in the morning so we can discuss.

Scott,

Great talking with you this morning. You will receive the file from Det. Pat Mulholland. After reviewing the file, would you let me know if this is a case your office would be willing to prosecute if necessary. I ask this only as I am still waiting to hear if Rockingham County Attorney Pat Conway is going to assign a Prosecutor to this case. My department prosecutor is contracted out of their office and this case is "too close to the vest" for her to prosecute. An opinion from the top Law Enforcement agency in the state would be greatly appreciated. Thanks again for your time.

Good morning Pat,

I have heard that you have asked Mandi to not prosecute the defamation case out of a conflict, which I can understand and also do not feel any other Attorney in your office should. If you have some available time, I would like to meet with you and discuss the options for who will or if I need to look to hire someone else for this case. Thanks for your time.

Good afternoon Chief – I was at a training in Providence, RI for a few days. I returned home tonight. I will give you a call on this asap. In terms of who will prosecute the case, you could call some of your fellow chiefs to inquire if they would allow their circuit court prosecutor to handle the case due to Mandi's conflict. I'm sure that you could return the favor some day.

I don't feel comfortable taking the case in my office and it is my position that my entire office has a conflict due to the relationship that we have with the Exeter Police Department and you.

As a last resort, I would ask other County Attorney's to take the case – but I feel they would be reluctant to do so as the charge is only a class B misdemeanor and generally speaking – we only handle felony cases and misdemeanors associated with felonies.

Thanks

Pat
